This card means a leader who is full of power and inspiration. He is visionary and ambitious to reach his goal. Likewise, he is not afraid to face obstacles at all.

The reverse meaning

This person is a rash and his talent was overwhelming, so people cannot follow up and he can make mistakes. He should be patient and wait for others.

ONE CARD TAROT READING

Reading one tarot card is the easiest way. You can follow these steps below.

1.Ask your tarot card one question, and it should be simple. For example, Should I eat this? Should I buy this? Like it or Is he angry?

2.Concentrate and shuffle your tarot card. Some people shuffle with age. Some people have the exact number they like. Some people believe in using their left hand. All in all, it is up to the belief and does what you prefer.

3.Pick a card from the deck. Some people use their left hand because it is closest to the heart. Some people shuffle the tarot card until it fall out of the set.

4.Open the card, which is the answer to your question.

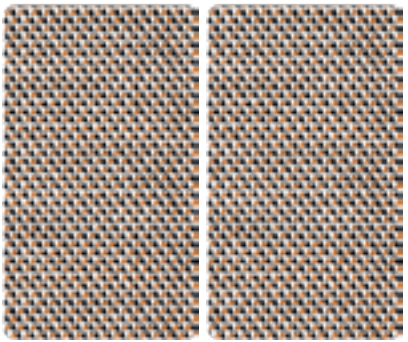

Reading one tarot card is forthright. For instance, if you ask a question, will this person love you? And you get The Lover card. It means they definitely love you.

If you ask a question, Is your financial situation good? And you get Ace of Pentacles. It indicates that you are lucky in money. However, if you get Five of Pentacles, it means you may have some serious money problems that can cause you to be broke or bankrupt.

TWO CARDS TAROT READING

The two-card tarot reading is simpler to understand, and the answer is more detailed and evident than the one-card reading, with the second card expounding on the first card's answer more vividly. As an example,

When you question, "How does he feel about you?" Then receiving "The Hanged Man," card would undoubtedly show that "he's confusing," especially when paired with the second card of "Two of Swords," which signifies that "there's more than one great choice." All of those cards may be interpreted as "he's confused because he has more than one great choice."

If the second card turns, for example, to "Page of Cups," which means "Begin studying about the relationship," this could be defined as "he's confused because the relation's just beginning, he's unsure and doesn't know what to do. So you should just take very good care of your relationship with him."

As one can see, if the second card changes, the entire meaning changes as well.

THREE CARDS TAROT READING

Three-card readings are much more complex than one-card and two-card readings which involve the position of the card's significance.

The three-card reading approach is picking three cards, reading the cards in order of appearance, and lastly reading the meaning of the cards depending on their position.

The procedure is as follows:

1.Draw the cards into question on purpose.

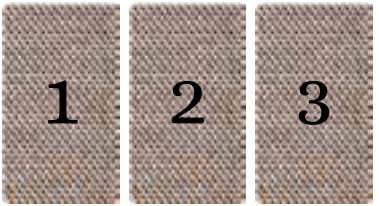

2.Shuffle the deck and pick three cards.

3.Lay out the cards face down.

4.Carefully open the first card and read the message in order until all three cards have been explained.

5.View a summary of all cards.

Three cards readings are assigned the function of the card's position, which allows the meaning of the card to be defined more diversely and complexly, where the position of the card is often described in a multitude of ways, such as

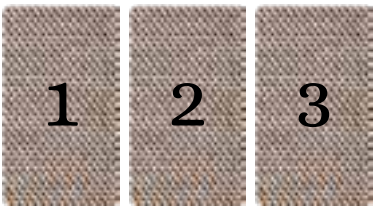

• The first position symbolizes identity.

• The second position symbolizes what would be coming in.

• The third position symbolizes overview.

Each position can change the function based on their preferences, such like:

• The first position symbolizes the past.

• The second position symbolizes the present.

• The third position symbolizes the future.

The three-card reading may be read as a storyline in which the meaning of the card changes depending on its position; for example, if the "Ace of Wands" is in the first position, it might be read as "you have a great desire to begin a new project." However, if it was the last position, it may be changed to "it's preferable to stop what you're doing and focus on the new things that are coming." Reading three cards needs imagination, comprehension, and a multifaceted combination, all of which need experience. Despite this, reading the tarot cards is similar to reading a short story that can be read and summarized in a short amount of time, such like:

• The first position symbolizes identity.

• The second position symbolizes what would be coming in.

• The third position symbolizes overview.

The position of the cards appears in the following position, and the cards are picked in the order listed.

You will be able to read the cards as follows:

1. For your identity, pick a "Seven of Cups" card, which symbolizes "There is plenty to desire for."

2. For things that are coming to you is the "Four of Cups" card, which symbolizes. "Something is going on and it was a nice offer, but you were uninterested."

3. For your summary is "The Sun" card, which symbolizes "bright, brilliant, and joyous."

These three cards might simply mean "You have a lot of wish lists and offers to pour in, but you're so demanding. However, you have no regrets because you are already pleased."

Yet, if the final card is dealt, the "Five of Cups" symbolizes the title "The Sun," which means "Regret of passing." So, the whole meaning is changed into:

"You have a lot of wish lists and offers to pour in, but you're so demanding. And then, in the end, you will lose all of them, regretting your previous actions. It's too pity you didn't take advantage of the opportunity."

As you can see, when the one card changes, it affects the overall meaning of the card readings, which has a significant impact more than the two-card readings as three-card readings are more complicated and profound.
